1. Introduction to referencing

Referencing at Abertay

Most Abertay programmes and modules will require you to use the Harvard system of referencing. However if you are taking psychology modules, you will need to use the APA (American Psychological Association) style. For law modules use the OSCOLA (Oxford University Standard for Citation of Legal Authorities) style.

You will normally be shown these styles in class, either by your subject tutor or by a librarian.

There is also a referencing section in the StudySkills@Abertay module on Blackboard (<https://blackboard.abertay.ac.uk>) which all students and staff can access, both on and off campus, from the Library website.

If you don't see an example of what you need to reference in this booklet, or in the Blackboard module, you can ask for help at the Support Enquiry Zone on Level 1 of the Library.

What is Harvard referencing?

The Harvard system (sometimes referred to as the Name and Date system), is just one of several different methods and styles of referencing. The University has adopted the Harvard System as the 'house style', and it should be used in course works, essays and projects, reading lists and other University publications.

In the Harvard System the author's name and year of publication are given in the text of the document in round brackets, e.g. (Cottrell 2013). This is called 'citing in-text' and there is more information on pp.4-6.

Full bibliographic details of each reference are then given in a list of references and possibly a bibliography at the end of the document. For example:

Reference list

Cottrell, S. 2013. The study skills handbook. 4th ed. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan.

O'Leary, Z. 2010. The essential guide to doing your research project. London: Sage.

If you are interested in using RefWorks reference management software to store your references and create reference lists, email library@abertay.ac.uk or visit Supporting You > Referencing help > RefWorks on the library website.

Bibliographies and reference lists

What is the difference between a bibliography and a list of references?

All your written work should have a list of references, and major pieces of work may also require a full bibliography. Your tutor will tell you if a bibliography is required.

The Harvard system requires that your references are listed in alphabetical order by author, and in the same line. The layout is the same for both reference list and bibliography.

What is a bibliography?

A bibliography is a list, which includes the references, but may also contain details of other documents you have consulted but have not mentioned directly in your work.

More than anything, listing your references gives anyone reading your work the option to read more on the subject. It also reassures your lecturers that you've read up on the subject and have applied that knowledge to your work.

What is the reference list?

A list of references refers to the documents, e.g. books, journals and web pages, which have been referred to and quoted from in writing the report or coursework.

Every document, electronic or paper, that you use should be included. Anything you have cited in text should appear in your reference list, and everything in your reference list should be cited in text.

Write your reference first, as that requires you to identify author, title, date etc. Then it is easy to identify the information you require for the in-text citation.

General advice on the reference list (and bibliography)

- Your reference list should be arranged A-Z by author.
- Write the surname or family name first, followed by initials for the first or given names. e.g. Moran, J., Hull, V. and Wheeler, D.
- If the author has more than one first name, e.g. John Adam Michael Johnson, you would initialise them all, e.g. Johnson, J.A.M.
- Multiple authors are linked with and not &.
- If there is no author you need to use Anon. e.g. Anon. 2001.
- One, two or three authors write them all out e.g. Moran, J., Hull, V. and Wheeler, D. 2013.
- Four or more authors you can write the first one followed by 'et al'. ('et al' is short for the Latin 'et alii' meaning and others) e.g. Smith, J., et al. 2013.
- Anything produced by an organisation is referred to as having a corporate author, e.g. Abertay University, Royal College of Nursing, Food Standards Agency. These should be listed alphabetically.
- If the author is a government department it is necessary to add the prefix 'Great Britain' because many countries, including the USA, have government departments with the same names, e.g. Great Britain. Department of the Environment. 1990. This common inheritance: Britain's environmental strategy. London: HMSO.
- If a book has an editor or editors, use the abbreviation ed. (singular) or eds. (plural) after the name e.g. Moran, J., Hull, V. and Wheeler, D. eds. 2013.
- Can't find the year the item was published, use 'no date' in square brackets e.g. Moran, J., Hull, V. and Wheeler, D. [no date].
- More than one place of publication, use the first place mentioned or the UK.
- Use a town or city as place of publication, not a country. If it is a town or city in the USA, add the abbreviation for the state e.g. Boston, MA. This information can usually be found on the reverse of the title page of a book.

Citing references in-text

Whenever you use information from a journal, book or website it is vital that you cite the material within your work in addition to providing a list of references at the end.

How do I cite references in-text?

You need to include the author or creator's surname and the date of publication (in brackets). If you are quoting the exact words or referring to a chart or graph then you should also include the page number. These in-text citations then link to the full references in your list at the end of your document.

General advice on in-text citation

- The author's name must be the same as you use in the full reference you include at the end of your document.
- Personal authors – use the surname(s) only e.g. (Black 2013) (Ross and Gordon 2013). If you are using a direct quotation you should add the page number e.g. (Black 2013, p. 45) (Ross and Gordon 2013, p.256).
- Multiple authors – up to 3 write them all out, e.g. (Brown, Green and White 2013).
- Multiple authors – 4 or more include the first then 'et al.' e.g. (Hamilton et al. 2012).
- Corporate authors – include the full name e.g. (Abertay University 2014) – not abbreviated.
- Missing authors – if you have decided to use Anon. in your full reference, then you must include this in your in-text citation e.g. (Anon. 1896) - but before using Anon check whether there might be a corporate author responsible for the work.
- Missing date – either (Smith [no date]) or (Smith [2012?]).
- More than one reference by the same author(s) with the same date of publication, use 'a' for the first, 'b' for the second, etc. e.g. (Smith 1993a) for the first citation then (Smith 1993b) for the next one.
- More than one reference by the same author(s) with different dates of publication, arrange them chronologically, separated by a comma e.g. Homelessness was shown to have increased as a result of the change in legislation (Williams 1991, 1994).
- Citing more than one author's work in an in-text citation. You can do this by including them all in the same brackets e.g. (Smith 1993, Williams 1991).
- Direct quote from a website or an e-book with no page numbers. Give a paragraph number or similar to help pinpoint your quotation.
- Legal cases – When you cite for the first time you should give the full case name and reference (Barry George v R. 2007. EWCA Crim 2722). Subsequent references should be party names and year (Barry George v R. 2007) unless you refer to several cases that include the same parties in which case you should still continue to use the full citation.

Quoting directly from the book, journal or website

Direct quotations from a document should be in quotation marks, e.g.

Perhaps artists need to feel politically motivated against oppressive regimes in order to etch their identity clearly against a social and political reality they deplore. After all, “In a dark time, the eye begins to see” (Roethke 1966, p.239).

If it is a long quotation, and you want to leave out part of it, you can replace the words omitted with an ellipsis ...

“The Simpsons overshadows most every other television program in its biting satire of American life. The show appeals to children and adults alike...” (Kubey 2004, p.137).

Paraphrasing (rewriting what has been said in the book, journal or website)

There are several ways to include a paraphrase in your text, e.g.

- Historically, periods of famine, and carbohydrate and protein malnutrition, have been associated with significant increases in crime and violence (Anon. 1981).
- ...the market for all types of reduced-calorie foods was estimated at £1.5 billion in 1994 (Economist Intelligence Unit 1994).
- By using a mathematical model (Bilbrey and Rawls 1968), we could project...
- Nevertheless, Lautenbach (2001) presents an array of evidence that handwashing by all health care workers is performed at very low rates. In the 11 studies reviewed, rates of handwashing ranged from 16 to 81 percent; only two studies noted compliance levels above 50 percent.
- Fine and Wright (1991) discuss the failings of current health education models which are based on the concept of the ‘trickle down’ of nutritional information.
- Bilbrey et al. (1968) developed a technique for...
- Several theories have been proposed for measuring soil water potential (Adcock 1988, Bilbrey and Rawls 1968a,b, Dobbins 1981, Ferguson and Fox 1979, Fox 1991, Lennon et al. 1992, Watson et al. 1985). These theories allow for...
- Smith (1958), Brown (1964) and Jones (1992) all believe that...

Remove your in text citation – does your sentence still make sense? This might help you decide whether you need to include name and date or just date in brackets.

Referencing secondary sources

Often, when reading books and journals, you will find authors quoting from, or making reference to another author's work. If at all possible you should try and read the original material, but if that is not possible, make sure you mention both the original and secondary source in your text and in your reference list.

Citing secondary references in text

You can make reference to the secondary source in the text of your document, as long as you remember to provide details of both sources; the one you are referring to and the one you consulted. To indicate that the secondary source was referred to in the original work, you can use either of the phrases - cited in: or quoted in:

Cited in means that information from the secondary source is referred to; quoted in means that there is a quotation from the secondary source included.

Greenhalgh (2006, quoted in Jesson, Matheson and Lacey 2011, p.130) states that ...

Or

Meta-analysis can be defined as “a specialised type of systematic review ... used for quantitative studies” (Greenhalgh 2006, cited in Jesson, Matheson and Lacey 2011, p.129).

2. Referencing books

Referencing books (print & e-books)

Because of the increasing availability of e-books which are identical to the print edition, print and e-books are referenced the same way when all the details such as the publication date, publisher, edition and page numbers are available.

What do I need to include?

- Author(s) or editor(s). If a book has an editor rather than an author this should be quite clear from the title page, where the words editor(s) or edited by should appear beside the person's name.
- Year of publication.
- Title in italics. The first letter of a book title is always put in capitals, with each of the following words written in lower case - unless a proper noun is used, (e.g. Scotland, Microsoft, Barack Obama).
- Edition number if it is a 2nd ed., 3rd ed. etc. or if it is a revised edition Rev. ed. Only mention the edition if it is clearly stated on the document.
- Place of publication. It is not necessary to include a place of publication for e-books.
- Publisher.

You should be able to find all this information on the book's front or back cover or the first few pages before the list of contents. You could also check the catalogue record for the book at <http://librarysearch.abertay.ac.uk>

Smith, P.B. [no date]. Waulking cloth in the Scottish Highlands: songs and chants. Edinburgh: Henderson and Black.

Downloadable e-books e.g. Kindle

On some e-devices (e.g. Kindle, Kobo. etc.) specific page numbers are not available. If you have used a quote from a book downloaded onto your personal e-device then instead of the page number use the information you have (loc, %, chapter). You can also indicate in the reference list that this was a book on an e-device.

In-text citation

If you are not using quotes from the book and the e-book on your device is essentially the same as the print book, then just reference your e-book as you would the print edition and follow the example given on the previous page.

Book Chapters

- Author(s) of the individual chapter/article.
- Publication date of the book and the individual chapter/article (this may be the same as the book date).
- Title of the chapter/article.
- In: Editor(s) of the book.
- Title of the book in italics
- Place and publisher.
- Publication date of the individual chapter/article (this may be the same as the book date).
- Inclusive page numbers.

3. Referencing journal and newspaper articles

Journal articles

What do I need to include?

- Author(s) of the article.
- Year of publication.
- Title of the article. The first letter of the first word of a journal article is capitalised, with each of the following words written in lower case - unless a proper noun is used, (e.g. Scotland, Microsoft, Barrack Obama)
- Title of the journal (not abbreviated), in italics. Every keyword in the title of a journal is capitalised except words like 'and', 'of', 'for', which are not keywords. 'The' would be capitalised only if it is the first word of the journal title.
- Volume number. Do not include the word 'volume'.
- Part or issue number, or month of publication. Issue or part number appears as a number in brackets. If there is no number you can include a month or other description e.g. (Jan), (Spring).
- Inclusive page numbers. Page numbers - include all, preceded by 'p.' (single page) or 'pp.' (multiple pages)

In press articles

In press articles have no volume, issue or part numbers provided so you reference these slightly differently from normal online articles. Most will have a doi and you should use this in your reference if it is available along with an access date. (A doi is a persistent link to the article's location on the Internet).

Online Journals where there are no page numbers

There are an increasing number of journals which are only published online. These journals do not have page numbers like a traditional print journal. Most will have a doi.

To reference these articles you need to include:

- Author.
- Year of publication.
- Article title.
- Journal title (in italics).
- Volume number.
- Issue number (if there is one).
- Available from: use doi if there is one; if not use the URL.
- Accessed date.

Newspaper articles

Where no author is given use the title of the newspaper for the author, e.g. The Independent.

In-text citation

Not everyone believes it is a one-horse race. According to the Liberal Democrat Simon Hughes, "We can overtake the Tories and beat the incumbent Mayor. 4. Referencing electronic materials

Referencing websites

When you write a reference for a website, just as for a book or journal article, you have to ensure that you record enough information to enable someone to identify and find the website you have used. You need:

- Author(s) or creator(s) of the document or web page.
- Date of publication. This often appears in the copyright statement at the foot of the document so could be the current year. However, specific documents on a website may have their own publication dates.
- Document title. If you are referencing the home page of an organisation and the page does not have an obvious title, then you can leave it out.
- Available from: URL, e.g. Available from: <http://www.globaljustice.org.uk>. Excessively long URLs may be shortened as long as the route remains clear, e.g. <http://www.globaljustice.org.uk> Path: Resources> Food
- Date of access in square brackets.

When citing in text follow the same rules as for any document i.e. author and date – not a URL.

Images

All illustrations, photographs, maps, diagrams and graphics including those downloaded from the Internet should be referenced and cited in text.

If the image comes from a book, just give the full book reference – your in-text citation should include the page where the image itself may be located (e.g. the above image ‘Goats in the Spanish heartland’ is found on p.15 of the following title): Quick, A. 2006. Travels with my father. Cupar: Imaginary Press. Put your citation directly above, under or next to the image.

For other image references, you need to include:
